

Henry Holland Serving Platter

£81 Regular

£65 SOHO HOME+

Product details

Shoreditch House member and British designer, Henry Holland, left the fashion world to explore the Japanese art of Nerikomi - an artistic technique that involves hand-building pottery with different colours of clay. In an exclusive collaboration with Soho House, Henry Holland Studio expresses the meditative yet playful nature of ceramics through a collection of glazed tableware and home accessories in tones of terracotta and blue. Each limited-edition piece is entirely unique and reflects the designer's evolutionary design aesthetic.

- Hand-built ceramic platter
- High-gloss glaze
- Entirely unique
- Nerikomi pottery technique
- Made by Henry Holland Studio
- A collaboration with Soho House

Dimensions

H3 x W33 x D33cm / H1.2 x W13 x D13"

Weight

0.674kg / 1.5lbs

Details

Material: Earthenware Clay

Care Instructions: All our pieces are hand-built using a slab building technique and finished with a transparent high-gloss glaze to show the distinctive pattern of the clay.

The nature of our making process means that each and every piece is unique and designs, colour, and patterns may vary. Dinnerware safe and durable for everyday use, please handle with care. We recommend to hand wash with a gentle liquid soap, please avoid stacking or if a mug avoid hanging from the handle.